

Hicks & Funfsinn, PLLC Opens Law Offices in Lexington and Harrodsburg

Boutique civil litigation law firm to service people in need of legal help in Kentucky

Lexington, January 2, 2018 – Joshua D. Hicks and Gregory M. Funfsinn are pleased to announce the opening of Hicks & Funfsinn, PLLC, a boutique civil litigation law firm with offices located at 431 South Broadway in Lexington, Kentucky and 111 Short Street, Lawyer’s Row, in Harrodsburg, Kentucky. Hicks and Funfsinn plan to assist clients throughout the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Hicks & Funfsinn, PLLC will prosecute and defend catastrophic accident and other claims involving injuries due to negligence or wrongdoing. Other practice areas will include financial disputes and workplace lawsuits.

Hicks and Funfsinn have nearly 20 years’ of combined legal experience, including hundreds of trials, depositions, and court hearings on cases involving negligence, construction defects, products liability, business litigation, and other disputes.

Hicks, who is currently running for Kentucky state representative, is a former United States Marine Corps Sergeant, serving from 1999-2003. Hicks then worked as a police officer for Maysville Police Department for five years before attending the University of Kentucky Law School, where he graduated in 2008. Hicks most recently worked as an attorney for Stoll Keenon Ogden PLLC in its Lexington office. Hicks resides in Lexington.

Funfsinn was most recently a partner at Walters Meadows Richardson, PLLC and also worked as an attorney at Landrum & Shouse LLP. Prior to moving to Lexington from Chicago in 2012, Funfsinn worked for the Cook County State's Attorney's Office (CCSAO), the second largest prosecutors’ office in the United States, as a criminal prosecutor. He graduated from Chicago-Kent College of Law in 2007. Funfsinn resides in Lexington.
